THE PLAGUE

The youngest of a family of seven, Adiris was left on the steps of the Temple of Purgation at the center of Babylon. As she came of age, a catastrophic plague wreaked havoc on the region, and priests who performed the daily cleansing fell ill. Adiris, having assisted in many rituals, was the only one able to carry on.

She attended to the sickly masses, even cutting the toe from her foot to appease the gods and ask for their protection. Tales of her wealth, beauty, and devotion spread across the city as swiftly as the disease, but soon, she too became ill.

No ritual could save her. In a desperate attempt to appease the gods, Adiris banished herself from the city.

In a cave, accompanied by her closest followers, she collapsed in a pool of vomit. Desperate, she made one final prayer.
